Sakon Nakhon is a Buddhist town with five Buddhist stupas. Its history can be dated back for three thousand years. Legend says that Nong Han town, or presently Sakon Nakhon, was built in 11th century when Khmer ruled this region. When the Khmer lost its power, the town was under the rules of Lanxang or Laotian Kingdom. It was renamed into "Mueang Chiang Mai Nongharn". When the town was under Siamese Kingdom, it was renamed again into "Sakon Thawapi". In 1830, during the reign of King Rama III, it was named "Sakon Nakhon".

Sakon Nakhon Province is 647 kms from Bangkok.
